Teaching Learners using Differentiated Learning Pedagogy

Overview:

Since the beginning of the 20th century, our education system has measured children's ability and intelligence (IQ) on the basis of standardized tests. This process of testing children, however, does more damage than good. Children who do not do well on these tests are labelled and hence lose their self-esteem. The start of the 21st century has brought with it the emergence of more inclusive theories on intelligence such as Gardner's theory of Multiple Intelligences and according to him all children are smart and capable of learning. It is up to the education system to tap into those intelligences that are dominant in each individual child, in order to be successful in educating all children, and bringing out their potential to the fullest. Hence this workshop gears around situating, valuing and nurturing Multiple Intelligence in our classrooms in today's time.

Contents:

- ◆ Why is it important to assessing children's Intelligence?
- ◆ Why Multiple Intelligence is needed in today's age?
- ◆ Multiple Intelligence: What, why and How of it.
- ◆ Styles of learners and learning
- ◆ Analyse classroom environment using MI
- ◆ Develop practical strategies of MI in classrooms
