The Institute of Business Administration (IBA) - Karachi through its Centre for Executive Education (CEE) has launched the IBA DRF to promote mediation as an appropriate means of resolving disputes, especially in the civil/commercial space. The IBA DRF will seek to implement non-Court based practices of dispute resolution and negotiation, by working on real world disputes, improving conflict intervention methods, providing education and training, writing and disseminating conflict resolution techniques and practices.

Why become a Mediator in Sindh?

Section 89-A of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908 was amended in Sindh. It will now be activated through the Sindh High Court referring live litigation cases to mediation to IBA DRF.

This means that Mediators in Sindh have the opportunity to earn an income by resolving cases referred by the Sindh High Court under the new mediation referral scheme.

I have been mediating since 2005 and have a wide civil/commercial practice where I have undertaken over 500 cases in that time. I regularly undertake complex multi-disciplinary and multi-party cases. I always approach my mediations with a strong sense of neutrality and confidentiality to ensure that I gain the parties' trust and confidence in the process.

I have a keen interest in the cross-cultural issues that can often become a barrier to settlement. As the lead faculty member for ADR ODR International I am always refining new techniques to ensure that parties feel that the process has served their interests. I work extremely hard to ensure that I listen to what the parties need, which I feel is vital in reaching a meaningful settlement.
